CHAPTER XXXI.

The Chinnery Family—Viotti—Windsor—Hampton Court—Herschel—Bath—The Duchess of Dorset—Madame de Vaudreuil—M. le Duc d'Orleans—M. le Duc de Montpensier—The Margravine of Anspach—Stowe—Warwick.

I again met in London the amiable Comte de Vaudreuil. He was looking much changed and very thin. All that he had gone through in France had shaken his constitution. He had married his niece whilst in England, and I went to see her at Twickenham, where she resided. Madame la Comtesse de Vaudreuil was young and pretty. She had large blue eyes, and a charming, fresh face. She invited me to spend a few days with her, at Twickenham, which I did, and during that time took the portrait of her two sons.
